Empowering Girls and Young Women Across Europe and the MENA Region

NEWSLETTER 4

The project focuses on building partners capacity to put barriers and address stereotypes that lead to gender inequality in their communities.

Final meeting in Cairo, EG

On 17–18 September, the ENHANCE consortium gathered in Cairo for its final transnational meeting. Over two days, partners reviewed the project's journey, discussed the completion of the remaining activities and aligned on the final steps.

Empowering Girls and Young Women Across Europe and the MENA Region

ENHANCE moved from training to action!

Following a key planning meeting in Skopje, project partners have finalized their upcoming local activities with EU partner support.

FRM provided a unified programme template, while partners aligned on reporting documents and established a CPD certification scheme for participants. To maximize local impact despite geographical distance, the two Jordanian associations will roll out independent, targeted activities rather than joint events, ensuring tailored engagement across regions.

Each non-EU partner adapted the camp methodology to its local community and delivered three engaging activities: a project presentation, a seminar for educators, and a hands-on Community Circles session.

Young people and youth workers explored inclusive non-formal education in practice, built local connections, and gained the skills and motivation to continue and replicate the approach in their communities.

From Shared Learning to Lasting Local Impact

As EnHANCE reaches its conclusion, partners are celebrating a journey that strengthened organisations, youth workers and communities across the MENA region. Through international cooperation, practical training and local action, the project turned shared knowledge into inclusive approaches that support girls and young women, reinforce community participation and create safer spaces for dialogue and learning.

A Shared Path of Growth

Across the partnership, teams moved from ad-hoc approaches towards more structured and transparent project management. They strengthened their skills in planning, budgeting, task allocation and risk management, while building greater trust among volunteers, participants and local stakeholders. Community Circles, restorative practices and non-formal education became central tools for meaningful participation.

By prioritising active listening, shared responsibility and youth-centred learning, partners created welcoming environments where young people—especially girls and young women facing barriers—could express themselves, build confidence and contribute to community life.

Building a Lasting Legacy for Youth & Communities

The ENHANCE project demonstrates that sustainable social change grows from equal cooperation, local ownership, and flexible methodologies that respond directly to real community needs. By combining organizational capacity building with field-tested youth work tools, the project concludes with stronger institutions, highly skilled youth workers, and a durable commitment to gender equality.

ENHANCE has shown that sustainable change grows from cooperation, local ownership and methods that respond to real community needs. The project ends with stronger organisations, better-equipped youth workers and a shared commitment to inclusion. Most importantly, its tools and relationships remain ready to inspire new activities, partnerships and opportunities for young people long after the formal project period.

The project's legacy will continue through the integration of ENHANCE methods and resources into regular organisational activities. Trained youth workers and participants can act as multipliers, while cooperation with educators, community organisations and local institutions will support future workshops, dialogue sessions and new initiatives.
